Katherine joined Thomas Jefferson University's College of Nursing in 2018 and assumed the role of the Director of Business Planning. In this role, Katherine manages the college's annual operating budget, annual capital budget, and multi-year financial plan. She is responsible for establishing financial analysis, forecasting, budgeting, policies, and procedures. In addition to providing administrative oversight and strategic guidance for financial activities and business planning, Katherine works to establish the business environment to support the academic, research, and strategic initiatives.

Katherine works directly with the dean and associate deans on financial planning and development of a comprehensive financial plan that evaluates the strategic and programmatic impacts of new initiatives, as well as those associated with internal and external trends.

Prior to her current role at the university, Katherine served as the lead financial analyst for the Vicki & Jack Farber Institute of Neuroscience at Jefferson Health, where she led the finance operations for the Neurology & Neurosurgery departments. This included the management and maintenance of all statistical and financial summary reports for the departmental clinical practices and academic programs.

Katherine holds a master's degree in business administration from Philadelphia University as well as a bachelor's degree in finance.
